KANSAS CITY, Sept. 26 (A) Several crudely made crosses were burned early today in a mixed Negro and white neighbor-check over the bullet-riddled wreckage of a Jordan army scout car in the Husan area after a heavy reprisal raid by Israeli forces Tuesday. The raid, described as the bloodiest against Jordan, stirred up a diplomatic hornets nest and brought conflicting claims from both sides. Jordan authorities acknowledged the death of 31 of their soldiers and claimed 100 Israelis killed. Israel said 50 Jordanians were killed against five Israeli dead and 19 wounded.

President Considers Visit To Baltimore

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26 (A) The White House said today President Eisenhower has under consideration a possible campaign visit to Baltimore

Press Secretary James C. Hagerty described it as under consideration when asked at a news conference whether the president would make an appearance in the Maryland city.

Gov. Theodore R. McKeldin of Maryland talked today with presidential assistant Sherman Adams about getting Eisenhower into

McKeldin was quoted as indicating the visit was virtually a certainty and that the main question now was of arranging a suitable date. McKeldin told a reporter (for the Baltimore Sun) that he was told Eisenhower is anxious to come to Maryland

Mahoney Urges Liberalization

George P. Mahoney, the Democratic senatorial candidate, spoke up for liberalized social security benefits today as he toured Montgomery County.

"I favor legislation which would permit retired persons to earn up to $2,000 a year in addition to their social security pensions," he said.

Mahoney made his remarks during one of several coffee hours at homes in the Wheaton and Kensington areas. He was accompanied by John R. Foley, Democratic candidate for Congress in Maryland's 6th District.

In visiting Montgomery County Mahoney was going into an area where he has been poorly treated in his four previous attempts to win public office.

eralized social security benefits, Mahoney said, "At present, persons between 65 and 72 years of age sacrifice social security benefits if they have outside earnings of more than $100 per month.

"Since the top pension under social security is only $108.50 per month and since few older persons have investment income to supplement their pensions, it is neces sary in these days of high living costs for them to forego retirement or to work part time."

He said the present limit on earnings is so "unrealistically low" that six out of every 10 perefits must forego retirement and continue working full time.

At the home of Mrs. Walter Slavin in Wheaton, a visitor, Mrs Stuart Brock, repeatedly asked Mahoney if he would not reconsider his decision rejecting a debate with his Republican opponent, Sen. John Marshall Butler.

Mahoney said his schedule made it impossible and that he and Sen. Butler will talk about the issues but not on the same plat GRESIK, Indonesia, Sept. 26 (A) -Fifteen months ago this village looked like many another in eastern Java.

Today, Gresik has a personality all its own. The tall trees in swamps nearby have been replaced by imposing giant kilns and huge concrete silos of Indonesia's first modern cement plant. designed and built by Americans.

In Indonesia, where foreign companies are viewed with suspicion, the completion of this 15million-dollar plant is viewed as a major step toward the country's industrial development.

Under the eyes of engineers from Morris-Knudsen International of San Francisco, the Indonesian-owned Gresik Cement Corp. is expected to begin production next May, three months ahead of schedule. The contract for its construction has signed with the Indonesian government in August 1955.

Half Indonesia's total cement needs of about 500,000 tons annually will be produced at Gresik.

this alley be opened to one-way come together.

The alley in question is owned by the YMCA and used by a couple of property owners to gain access to garages.

Preliminary planning has revealed a grade problem and traffic hazards when vehicles would enter Baltimore Avenue out of the proposed alley.

The study is the result of a suggestion made during a recent meeting of the Mayor and Council by several businessmen whose properties are on Baltimore Avenue across from YMCA. It came during their airing of a protest over the painting of a red line in front of their places of business. This was a move to eliminate parking and open up the street for through traffic. Since the protest, however, a yellow line has been painted to allow customers to stop at the business places concerned.

Twice Bitten, Thrice Shy?

The Kremlin is of course using the differences among the Western democracies over the Suez Canal to try to weaken their working partnership against Communist aggression. At the same time the Kremlin is using the canal crisis also for making up again to the moderate Socialists of Europe

The British Laborites, long anathema in Moscow as capitalist-imperialist boot-lickers, etc., etc., now get high praise there for opposing any British use of armed force against Egypt. The West German Socialists, once accused in Moscow of every crime in the calendar, now get fulsome praise for taking the same stand on Suez as their British comrades.

But Socialist Premier Guy Mollet of France gets malediction from the Russians for even considering the use of French forces to keep the canal open. To drive a wedge between French and British Socialists is part of the Moscow v tactics in now proposing a Socialist-Communist "peace front" on the Suez issue.

Well, last February also the Russian Reds proposed, through the Communist party congress in Moscow, that the old Communist-Socialist-left wing liberal pre-war "popular fronts" be revived. The Kremlin thought it had paved the way by renouncing the late Josef Stalin and all his works, but the moderate Socialists of Western Europe turned the Kremlin down cold.

It was a case of twice bitten, thrice shy. Popular fronts had been set up before World War II, in face of the threat of Hitler, only to have Communist Russia and Nazi Germany conclude their alliance that gave Hitler the green light for war. Then after the war Moscow made a mockery of the wartime and early postwar amity between the Soviet Union and the Democracies by launching its cold war against

Liz Writes A Book

The life of a wife of a columnist is not an easy one but Elizabeth Churchill Brown has found time to Washington scene either in company with her husband, Constantine Brown, or alone.

The book, "The Enemy at His Back," is a study of available but elusive information, most of which has already been published here and there. Liz Brown brings it all together and proves a point, namely, that we have for 20 years or so been governed by men without a sense of history, whose greatest ability seemed to be to cover up their errors or the errors of their chiefs. In fact, they wrapped them up in such delicious language that they ceased to look

For instance, the book cites the occasion of the decision to publish a document on the American policy toward Japan, particularly toward the emperor. There were those in the administration who wanted the emperor abolished, which others held would prolong the war indefinitely. So there were numerous conferences to consider the wording of a statement. There was endless talk but no one was quite willing to denounce the document because no one wanted to be responsible for guessing wrong, but General George Marshall postponed further discussion by saying the publication would be "premature." The one word did the job which it took all of General Douglas MacArthur's ingenuity later to undo

However, the document which on May 29, 1945, was declared to be premature was actually issued on July 26 of the same year, which surely is not a great lapse of time. The answer undoubtedly was that there was considerable pulling and pushing in the State Department and in the White House and there were all sorts of experts and authorities who have proved, in the long run of history, not to have been experts or authorities about anything, surely not about the Far East and beyond doubt not about Japan and the role of the emperor in Japanese history. Most of these experts have been forgotten by the American people but they still fill little niches in universities where they teach small phases of great subjects to admiring students.

Mrs. Brown's book establishes beyond doubt that from the available data it is certain that Japan was defeated long before the atom bomb was hurled at Hiroshima and that Japan was suing for peace. It is possible also to reach the conclusion from the data she presents that surely the Pentagon and the State Department and probably the White House were aware of the fact that Japan sought peace and that if the President was not fully informed, he and the American people were betrayed by those whom they trusted. It is a conclusion that it is inevitable from the available material.

There is a further point to be made on this subject, Prince Konoye kept a diary and I have been told authoritatively that his diary fully covers the period discussed in this book. I have also been informed that the Konoye Diary is in the United States. Mrs. Brown apparently has not had access to his diary, she not giving it in her extensive and carefully compiled bibliography. However, in an appendix there is a considerable quotation of a conversation between Prince Konove and the Emperor of Japan, which fully upholds the hypothesis that Japan wanted peace before the bomb was thrown at Hiroshima.

Liz Brown has done an excellent job of research and reporting in "The Enemy at His Back." It is a book to which one can refer not only for the needed fact, but also for easily accessible references to the sources, so that each statement, each quotation may speedily be checked. The unusual device is employed of putting the references in the margin close to the statement to which they refer. Senator William Knowland wrote a foreword for the book in which he says:

. . . 'The Enemy at His Back' will be of value to all individuals anxious for a free world of free men. We must recognize that in dealing with the Kremlin, the road to appeasement is not the road to peace. It is only surrender on the installment plan."

This is the thesis and the book might help those who really are interested in why so many things that look right, go wrong.

New Stevenson' Has Triumph In Des Moines

By Stewart Alsop

Last weekend, those two very different men, Dwight D. Eisenhower and Adlai Stevenson, both scored a triumph here in Iowa. President Eisenhower's triumph was personal. Adlai Stevenson's triumph was political. The difference tells a lot about the nature of the current campaign. All This And Heaven Too

The President, who was warm ly greeted by the greatest crowds in the history of Des Moines, amply demonstrated his own and the Republican party's great central asset - the genuine personal affection which the vast majority of the voters hold for him.

Attacker, Not Defender

But Adlai Stevenson also demonstrated a vital asset he did not that a favored high parity but enjoy in 1952. For in that cam- that it was not "the whole anpaign, he was forced into the po- swer," a truism hardly calculated sition of defending a record he certainly did not in all ways the record of Harry S. Truman. Now, he is no longer the defender, but the attacker. And anyone who doubts that Stevenson is effective on the attack should have seen his performance here in

For it was obvious here that something new had indeed been added to the old Stevenson the country heard in 1952. Like the old, the new Stevenson made But this time the jokes were not the small self-deprecatory wisecracks of the past. They were simply belly laughs, and buried in each one was a sharply pointed hook on which to impale Republicans. (Like the doubtless imaginary farmer who told Stevenson: "Governor, I'm a dairy farmer, and I know how to milk cows. But these Republicans are smarter than I am. They know how to milk farmers.") To judge from the reaction of the assembled farmers, far from resenting such simple but barbed humor. they loved it.

The new Stevenson, like the old, was eloquent. But he was eloquent in a different way. He was clearly not much interested "elevated discussions"

"democratic dialogues" to use two favorite phrases of the old Stevenson. He was interested in getting the farmers to vote for him. And he went about the job in a thoroughly workmanlike way.

Only a few months ago, after all, Stevenson sounded as though his heart really belonged to Ezra Taft Benson. Before the Minnesota primary, Sen. Hubert Humphrey had to twist his arm half off to get him to come out for 90 yer cent parity. Even then Stevenson habitually said to win farm votes, as the Minnesota outcome proved.

Here in Iowa, Stevenson promised the farmers all this and heaven too, including government support for hog prices. And his attack on the Eisenhower administration's handling of the farm problem was tough, meaty, and unashamedly partisan. Altogether, the new Stevenson unveiled here sounded like a more literate and cerebral Harry S. Truman, with overtones of Franklin Roosevelt. And this new Stevenson may well turn out to be a very formidable vote-getter indeed.

The Stevenson of 1956, moreover, is quite genuinely "new" in a number of ways. The Stevenson of 1952 was a man whose political experience was essentially parochial. In the last four years, especially in this year's primary campaigns, Stevenson has had a prolonged cram course in the political realities. He knows the special political situation in every corner of the country. He knows every leading Democrat in every state, usually on first name basis. He knows and understands what the professional politicians unpleasantly call the "gut issues"-the issues that really touch the hearts and the pocketbooks of the voters.

Even in this era of "peace and prosperity" there are many such issues, as anyone who has spent much time talking to the voters can attest. Stevenson no longer has the slightest compunction about exploiting the gut issues to the utmost. For Stevenson has also learned, as one of the professionals who now surround him up for the right of Negro children has remarked, that "you've got to attend school, was a close to be a candidate before you can

Above all, Stevenson is no longer hag-ridden by the great doubt. He is still sensitive to criticism. and he fusses endlessly over his speeches. But he no longer wonders in his own heart whether he would really make a better president than Dwight D. Eisenhower. He is sure he would. And he clearly means to do everything in his power, short of an outright compromise of his integrity to become president.

This new Stevenson, in short, in his new role as unabashed attacker, is a man to reckon with. The warmth and affection which the great crowds here displayed towards the President proved, if proof were needed, the immense personal popularity of Dwight D. Eisenhower. But in his all-out attack on the administration Stevenson also displayed remarkable political effectiveness, and one begins to wonder whether personal popularity will be sufficient armor against such attack.

controversy hasn't changed many

Actually few people realized how low the spirits of Internal Revenue employes sank under their former boss, T. Coleman Andrews. Andrews hated the income tax; consequently made his tax collectors feel he hated them too.

While nobody likes to pay taxes, and for that reason, tax agents are't particularly loved, nevertheless the entire structure of government collapses without them. Furthermore, most tax agents are hard-working, dedicated, underpaid men.

Since taking office last December, Harrington has traveled far and wide to meet Internal Revenue employes. As a result he's accomplished miracles in restoring the dignity of his once dispirited workers. Ordinary citizens may also be feeling the benefit of Harrington's reforms, for the new commissioner has been fighting against the insidious system of quotas admired so much by his predecess-

Under Andrews, regional directors were made to understand they'd have to settle a minimum number of disputed cases in order to earn good job ratings. Hence, time-consuming corporation cases werei gnored by inspectors, who instead concentrated on winning numerous small claims from private individuals.

Fortunately, the quota system was blasted by Harrington in a little-publicized speech last spring in Alabama. This was followed by letter to regional offices in which Harrington insisted that each case be handled on its merits.

Complaints are still heard, however, particularly about overzealous tax collectors who disallow claims so small that the tax-

Lasalie at the local stadium. The score was 32-0 in their first victory.

Don Lewis, right-halfback, accounted for two touchdowns and both extra points. Morralle, Weltman and Henry each scored once.

On the initial play from scrimmage Lewis broke loose and ran 39 yards for his first touchdown. His try for the extra point was good. Later in the same period Henry scored from 11 yards out. Lewis made his second tally in the second period on a three yard plunge. He missed the point and the half ended with the score 20-0. Chas. Citton 117 Basically.
